NEW BRIDGE AT ONCE IS URGED

Brightwood Citizens Petition Congress To Hasten Appropriation For Structure.

CATASTROPHE IS FEARED

Association Adopts Resolution Thanking Commissioners For Efforts In Ending Carmen's Strike.

A resolution urging Congress to hasten the appropriation for a new Aqueduct bridge to span the Potomac at Thirty-sixth street northwest was adopted by the Brightwood Citizens' Association at a meeting in the Brightwood School last night.

Wilton J. Lambert, in offering the resolution, expressed fear that a catastrophe is likely to occur unless the present bridge is repaired or replaced by a new structure.

On motion of William McK. Clayton, a resolution was adopted commending the Commissioners and Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, superintendent of police, for the manner in which they handled the carmen's strike. In conclusion, Mr. Clayton's resolution reads:

Citizens Proud of Record.

"The people of the District are proud of the record made by their city during the strike, for the forbearance of the companies, and the orderly conduct of the men, not a single arrest having been made nor a dollar's worth of property either company injured or destroyed; and we contrast this record with the records of law-breaking, pillage, and destruction in other American cities where similar strikes have occurred."

A long list of improvements needed in the Brightwood School were outlined in the report of J. L. Ergood, chairman of the school committee. The report asks for the establishment of a kindergarten. It also asked that the building be painted electric light installed, and other minor repairs made.

Four Washingtonians With Troopers In Midst of Fighting Along Border

LIEUT. ROBERT O. ANNIN.

LIEUT. THEODORE BARNES, JR.

Four sons of three of Washington's prominent families are in the midst of the fighting in the border war, and their friends and families are anxiously awaiting news from the front.

They are Lieut. Theodore Barnes, Jr., of the Eighth Cavalry, and Lieut. Julian Barnes, of the Fifth Field Artillery, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Barnes, of 383 Wisconsin avenue; Lieut. Robert O. Annin, of the Eighth Cavalry, son of Mrs. W. E. Annin, of 826 Connecticut avenue, and Lieut. Ralph Barnes, also in the Eighth Cavalry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Barnes, of 3500 Fifteenth street, Brookland.

Both the Eighth Cavalry and Fifth Field Artillery are stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., the troops from which are now making ready for battle with the Mexican outlaws. Lieut. Annin, however, is with his troop at Fort Hancock.

Lieut. Barnes are both graduates of Western High School. Lieut. Hospital is a graduate of Central High School and of George Washington University. The three left Washington at the same time, having been commissioned in October, 1914. Lieut. Annin is a graduate of Princeton, 1915, and was commissioned in November, 1915.

Lieut. Clarence C. Benson, of Troop G, Thirteenth Cavalry, reported to have been wounded in the hand while in pursuit of Villa and his bandits, is a resident of Berwyn, Md., and a former cadet captain in the regiment of Washington high schools. He was graduated from West Point in 1914.

Capitol Backs Wilson's Move Even Should It Lead to War

Both Senate and House Approve President's Determination to Take Decisive Action in Mexico—Administration Will Be Given Free Hand in Ending Atrocities.

Both the Senate and the House of Representatives President Wilson's determination to take decisive action in Mexico was hailed with general approval.

With the purpose of the punitive expedition, whether it leads to war or not, no fault was found either by Democrats or Republicans. Over the methods that have been adopted by the President in dealing with the crisis there is some divergence of opinion under the shadowing possibilities of the border turbulence, however, there was no disposition to press the objections to the course followed by the President.

The foremost consideration which apparently actuated members of the House was to put a stop to the Mexican atrocities whatever the cost. So long as the administration is moving toward that end it will be given a free hand.

Representative Cooper, ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, brought up the question of the right of the President to send troops beyond the territorial limits of the United States without the consent of Congress when the committee met late in the day to hear what the President had done and to discuss the situation.

He showed no inclination to press this question. On both sides of the Chamber there was an appreciable undercurrent of dissatisfaction over the failure of the President to notify Congress before taking action. The parallel between the dispatch of the fleet to Vera Cruz and the dispatch of the punitive expedition across the border was drawn, but it was not put forward as a reason for hampering the activities of the War Department in the crisis.

While the President and his Cabinet were deliberating upon the course to be followed, the House paused for a short time in its routine labors for a brief debate. With the consent of the House Representative Smith, of Texas, in a ten-minute speech declared that the climax of the Mexican situation had been reached and demanded that action be taken. Representatives Slayden, of Texas; Lehlbach, of New Jersey, and Finally Fernandez, of New Mexico, reiterated the demand.

These declarations evoked no difference of opinion. Nor were they made with vehemence. In the demeanor of the House was nothing to indicate that matters of unusual gravity were in the balance.

Late in the afternoon Representative Flood, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, held a telephone conversation with the White House. He was informed by the President of the course that had been decided upon at the Cabinet meeting and was told that, unless unforeseen difficulties arose, there would be no need of invoking the aid of Congress in dealing with the situation. Mr. Flood was asked to call a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee, which he did, and the members of the administration were proceeding under the principle expressed in the treaty of June 25, 1890, permitting the pursuit of Indian marauders across the boundary line into the territory or either Mexico or the United States.

STEEL MAGNATES SEE GOOD TIMES AHEAD

Judge Gary and Schwab Predict Increasing Prosperity in All Classes of Industry.

Special to The Washington Herald.

New York, March 10.—"Conditions in the iron and steel industry are good. The future holds out no sign of a change. In fact, prosperity seems general throughout the country and in practically all classes of industry."

Judge Elbert H. Gary made the above statement today, following a meeting at the home of the directors of the American Iron & Steel Institute. Charles M. Schwab, Powell Stackhouse, Frank Witherbee, Willis King and many other men prominently identified with the steel industry were present. Only routine business was discussed.

"I think everybody present will concur with me in saying conditions are extraordinarily good," said Judge Gary, when pressed for a statement. In saying this he turned inquiringly to Mr. Schwab and others.

"Yes, indeed—extraordinarily good," echoed Mr. Schwab. The others voiced the same optimistic feeling.

CIVIC BODY SCORES BORLAND'S RIDER

Brookland Citizens Urge That Measure Be Killed In House—Plan Annual Flower Show.

The Brookland rider to the executive, judicial and legislative appropriation bill, to make government employees in the District work at least eight hours a day, was denounced by speakers at a meeting of the Brookland Citizens' Association last night.

On motion of W. G. Lewis, a resolution was adopted urging Congress to "kill" the rider. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the presiding officers of both houses.

The custom of the local authorities of assessing benefits against taxpayers for the opening and improving of new streets, long before the improvements actually are made, also was denounced.

The association indicated bills now pending in Congress, which provide that benefits shall be assessed but not collected, until the improvements have been made.

The annual flower show, held under joint auspices of the Brookland Citizens' Association and the Brookland Rose Society, will be held in Masonic Hall, Brookland, the latter part of May.

The committee on public utilities will ask the Commissioners to designate Twelfth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast as a fire stop for street cars.

Y. W. C. A. Thanks Herald.

At the regular meeting of the directors of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday morning resolutions were passed expressing the appreciation of the board for the space given by The Herald to the various association activities during the jubilee month just closed.

It is said. At 4:15 o'clock he was found by the hall boy stretched out on the floor of the bathroom.
